Not illustrated. 1809 Excerpt: .embrace was ardent, and tender; a short scene of sighs, and tears, and silence, followed;--a fine conflict of our best nature; pregnant with the most pathetick, and beautiful moral sentiments, and imagery; which refused that verbal expression that would have deadened their life, and action. When these agitations of affection subsided; our minds admitted language; descended to the level of calm condolence; and we payed our mutual tribute to the amiable, and pious life; and to the lamented death of my dear father. In this our first conversation, we could not avoid regretting our hard circumstances, and our discouraging prospects; but we mitigated them by a trust in Providence, and by a christian resignation. At this, as at every other trying juncture of my life, I felt a consolation, and a contrast to my sufferings, in my literary pursuits. I recommenced my studies in our humble...
