University of Nebraska Press, United States, 1963. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Stirring yarn of a man and his adventurous compatriots in the Indian infested mountains in search of pelts. - Palm Beach Post-Times. A tall man, with long black hair, smooth face, dark eyes (inclining to turn his head a little to one side, as much as to say, I can tell you about it), a harum-scarum, don t-care sort of man, full of life and fun. That s how a contemporary described Joe Meek. Born in Virginia, Joe Meek became a trapper, Indian fighter, pioneer, peace officer, frontier politician, and lover of practical jokes and Jacksonian democracy. He was a boon companion to two other larger-than-life mountain men, Kit Carson and Jim Bridger, and just as important in frontier history. In 1829, our nineteen-year-old hero joined the Rocky Mountain Fur Company of Jedediah Smith and the Sublettes and headed west on an odyssey of hair-raising high adventure and hilarious low comedy. For the next twelve years, the Rockies rang with tales of Joe s wild exploits. After the Last Rendezvous in 1840, he helped drive the first wagons to Oregon, served in the legislature of the provisional government, and went to Washington as a special envoy to President Polk. He later returned to Oregon to live out his days in the community that he helped build. Stanley Vestal (1887-1957) wrote more than twenty books, including Jim Bridger: Mountain Man , also available as a Bison Book.
